AFloat 2021 brings together leading offshore wind experts to address the drivers, challenges, and opportunities to prepare the U.S. for floating offshore wind. The agenda focuses on topics related to research and development, emerging technologies, permitting, and design to address drivers and challenges from a technical, regulatory, and permitting perspective. Existing and planned projects will be reviewed, including New England Aqua Ventus, the country's first commercial-scale floating offshore wind project that will be deployed in the Gulf of Maine. AFloat 2020 had nearly 600 registrants from around the world.
